Valentine's Day Weekend brought unbridled romance to the Historic Core as thousands swooned their way through beautiful architecture, candle-lit restaurants, and late-night dance parties. Our gorgeous Broadway theaters saw special movie screenings hosted by organizers Cinespia and Street Food Cinema as movie goers filled the the Palace, Million Dollar, and Los Angeles Theatres.

On February 28th, The Historic Downtown Farmers Market had its best day ever with sales of $10,866 being the highest ever recorded for the Market. As our neighborhood continues to grow, we're happy to see our Market flourish under the excellent management of Rosa and Jose. We're proud to be the only Farmers Market in DTLA to accept EBT and to serve the entire community through programs like Market Match. Stop by the Market every Sunday, 9am-2pm on 5th Street between Broadway and Spring.

Spread Mediterranean Kitchen serves homemade hummus and falafel, Greek froyo, and cocktails at Main & 4th.

collective. The exhibition took place starting at dawn in a narrow alley between the historic Arcade and Cameo Theatres on Broadway. Thousands came from across the city and waited in line for a chance to slip inside the alley to experience their floral baptism.

This coming Sunday from 11am-12pm, bring the whole family to Om Nom Organics at 215 W 9th Street for our monthly Kids Story Hour. Each month, families gather together on the carpet to read stories donated by The Last Bookstore, play games, and make healthy snacks and smoothies courtesy of Om Nom.
